EDITORIAL GREETINGS

It is finally here. Our team worked hard for this year's Jurnal Ekonomi dan Bisnis Islam (JEBIS) publication. High appreciates the dedication given by all the team and reviewers. Also, we would like to thank the contribution of all authors by submitting their brilliant ideas and writings to JEBIS. All hard work paid off with the publication of JEBIS Volume 11 Edition 1, January-June 2025, on time.

In this edition, JEBIS feature thirteen scholarly articles that explore various themes within Islamic business, economics, and finance. Three articles focus on Islamic banking and governance, investigating topics such as risk mitigation through Islamic corporate governance, future directions of Indonesian Islamic banking, and the development of Maqasid-based ESG integration models. The Islamic capital market is addressed in two articles—one analyzing macroeconomic factors affecting the S&P/OIC COMCEC Shariah Index and another offering a systematic review of sukuk research trends. Three articles center on the halal industry and Islamic marketing, with studies on halal tourism behavior among Gen Z, the structure of the halal value chain, and innovation in Islamic microfinance through ijarah contracts. Sustainability themes are represented in three papers, ranging from the integration of Maqasid in sustainable development to the analysis of ESG impacts on firm value and Islamic finance's alignment with the SDGs. Additionally, one article contributes to the discourse on Islamic social finance by examining the role of Maqasid shariah in enhancing subjective well-being, while another explores the influence of Islamic values in empowering women entrepreneurs within MSMEs. Together, these articles offer a comprehensive and multi-dimensional view of current advances in Islamic economics and finance.

The articles that have been published are expected to help various parties in developing Islamic economics and finance. Therefore, the contribution of academics, practitioners, and researchers is needed to achieve this. Thank you in advance. See you in the next edition.
