I. DESCRIPTION

Jurnal Ners provides a platform for original research and scholarship relevant to nursing and other health-related professions. As a peer-reviewed scientific journal, Jurnal Ners is published quarterly (February, May, August, and November) by the Faculty of Nursing, Universitas Airlangga, Indonesia, in collaboration with the Indonesian National Nurses Association.

The journal particularly welcomes studies evaluating and understanding complex nursing care interventions, utilizing the most rigorous research designs and methodologies appropriate for the research questions at hand. Since its inception in 2006, Jurnal Ners has consistently published original, peer-reviewed articles of interest to the international nursing community, establishing itself as one of the longest-standing repositories of scholarship in the field.

Jurnal Ners offers authors several advantages of (1) A highly respected journal in the nursing field; (2) Indexed in major databases, such as SCOPUS, Science and Technology Index (SINTA); Directory of Open Access Journal (DOAJ); ProQuest; and EBSCO; (3) Rapid initial screening to assess suitability and editorial interest.. This journal is published and managed by The Institute of Innovation, Journals Development, Publishing, and Intellectual Property Rights (LIPJPHKI), Universitas Airlangga.

Jurnal Ners has been accredited by the Ministry of Science, Research, Technology, and Higher Education of Indonesia (RISTEKDIKTI RI) since 2010. The current accreditation number, No. 72/E/KPT/2024, is valid until 2028 (Download the decree).

2. FOCUS AND SCOPE

The scope of this journal includes studies that aim to examine and understand nursing care interventions and health policies, utilizing advanced nursing research from an Asian perspective. Jurnal Ners publishes research related to clinical settings, community health, and health policy in Asia, incorporating both comparative and international viewpoints.

We aim to evaluate and understand complex nursing care interventions in various domains, including Fundamentals of Nursing, Clinical Nursing, Community Health Nursing, and Mental Health Nursing. The journal is also committed to enhancing the quality of nursing research by publishing articles on analytical techniques, measurement tools, and research methodologies, including systematic review papers.

6. AUTHOR GUIDELINES

6.1 Ethics In Publication

This journal follows the Committee of Publication Ethics (COPE) guidelines and requests authors to familiarize themselves with these guidelines at: <http://publicationethics.org/resources/guidelines>. Authors should pay particular attention to the following points: If they have legitimate reasons for reporting separately on different parts of the same study or data set, they must justify this to the editor at the time of submission. Additionally, readers should be informed if different aspects of the same study are being reported. Therefore, the methods section of the submitted manuscript must clearly explain why the paper warrants separate reporting.

6.2 Types Of Manuscript

1. Original Articles

Original articles should present clinical studies or research that have not been previously published or are not under consideration for publication elsewhere. The manuscript should not exceed 7,000 words, including the list of authors and their affiliations, corresponding author information, acknowledgments, and figure legends. An abstract of no more than 250 words is required. References should primarily come from international journals indexed by Scopus or Web of Science, and the manuscript may include a maximum of five figures or tables.

2. Systematic Reviews

Systematic reviews are comprehensive, critical assessments of evidence from various data sources related to a specific topic in the field of nursing. A systematic search of relevant data sources must be conducted, and the collected items should be evaluated carefully for inclusion based on predefined inclusion/exclusion criteria. The review should include a detailed description and an analytical graphical representation of the process. The characteristics of the participants or patient populations in the studies included must be described, along with the measures of exposure and outcomes, indicating the corresponding data sources. A structured abstract is required, following the same format as for short reviews. The text should not exceed 7,000 words, including acknowledgments, and may include up to four tables and/or figures.

3. Meta-analyses

Meta-analyses should adhere to the same guidelines as systematic reviews. They are expected to provide comprehensive information and a statistical assessment of pooled estimates for predefined outcomes, study heterogeneity and quality, potential publication bias, meta-regression, and subgroup analyses where appropriate. Authors are encouraged to submit PRISMA flow diagrams, depending on the type of study. Both systematic reviews and meta-analyses will follow the same editorial process as original articles.

6.3 Submission Preparation

Submission preparation ensures that a manuscript meets the journal's initial requirements before submission. Authors must format their manuscripts according to the journal's guidelines, including adhering to the proper structure, citation style, and file organization. Additionally, required documents such as a cover letter and ethical declarations must be prepared and submitted along with the manuscript.

6.3.1 Language

Please ensure your manuscript is written in clear and correct English; both British and American English styles are accepted. Authors who believe their manuscript may benefit from language editing to correct grammatical or spelling errors and to align with proper scientific English conventions are encouraged to use an English Language Editing service. Any additional costs incurred will be the responsibility of the author.

6.3.2 Essential Requirements Before Submitting Your Manuscript

To ensure a smooth submission process and compliance with Jurnal Ners standards, please prepare the following essential requirements before submitting your manuscript:

1. Reference Management: The manuscript must utilize a reference manager (Mendeley is recommended).
2. Title Page: Include a complete title page as per the journal's guidelines (Template HERE).
3. Ethics Approval: Attach the ethics approval number and specify the ethics committee institution in the manuscript.
4. Plagiarism Check: Provide a plagiarism check report with a similarity index of less than 20%.
5. Template Compliance: Ensure the manuscript is formatted according to the Jurnal Ners template (Template HERE).

Submissions that fail to meet any of these five requirements will be immediately rejected. Authors may revise their manuscripts to address the issues and resubmit it for further consideration.

Jurnal Ners requires a formal written declaration and transfer of copyright from the author(s) for each article published. We, therefore, ask you to complete and return this form, retaining a copy for your own records. Your cooperation is essential and appreciated. Any delay will result in a delay in publication. The form can be downloaded HERE.

6.4 Submission Of Manuscripts

All manuscripts, correspondence and editorial material for publication is submitted online at <http://ejournal.unair.ac.id/index.php/JNERS> simply need to "create a new account" (i.e., register) by following the online instructions, and using their own e-mail address and selected password. Authors can submit manuscripts online. Authors can expect an initial decision to undergo peer-review.

6.5 Editorial Process

The editorial process refers to the structured steps undertaken by a publisher or journal to evaluate and decide whether a manuscript is suitable for publication. Generally, this process should take a maximum of 4 months, depending on the complexity of the manuscript, the quality of the research, and the efficiency of the editorial system.

6.5.1 Initial Assessment submission

The Initial Assessment submission involves a review of several administrative requirements to ensure the manuscript meets Jurnal Ners standards. During this stage, the following elements will be checked: Title Page (template here); Reference Style and Citation Management; Ethics Documentation; Turnitin Similarity Report less than 20%. Template Compliance (template here). This initial assessment ensures that submissions align with the journal's requirements before moving forward in the review process. Please note that if any of these elements are missing, Jurnal Ners will decline the submission. The author may then make the necessary corrections and resubmit. This stage typically takes between 1-2 days of submission.

6.5.2 Initial Editorial Assessment

Jurnal Ners is eager to provide a rapid publication process through an initial assessment conducted by an editorial committee consisting of the editorial team members. The primary purpose is to decide whether to send the paper for peer-review or to reject it. The main point is scope, compliance with the guideline, and language. Sometimes a paper will be returned to the author with a request for revisions with the purpose to help editors in deciding whether or not to send it out for review. Authors may expect the decision of the Initial Editorial Assessment from this stage of the review process within 1-7 days of submission.

6.5.3 Review Process

After passing the Initial Editorial Assessment, the article will be sent to peer-reviewers. The peer-review process involved at least two reviewers for each manuscript selected based on their expertise. All reviewing process is done by the double-blind review, which means the authors and peer-reviewers do not know each other's identity. The reviewers should complete the review within 4-8 weeks in each reviewing round after the review request was sent. Editors can offer feedback on manuscripts that have already undergone revisions by reviewers. This is aimed at supplementing the input to make the article feedback more comprehensive.

1. Review Criteria

Each paper that the editor/s assess as suitable for peer review is allocated to two reviewers who are asked to assess the paper against one of the Journal's three sets of reviewing criteria: Articles submitted for review must be original works, and may not be submitted for review elsewhere whilst under review for the Journal. After review, the Editor-in-Chief will inform the corresponding author on whether the paper has been accepted, rejected, or needs revision. Categories of decision: (a) Accept Minor revisions (accept with revisions as advised by Editors); (b) Major revisions (possible acceptance following major revision and resubmission); (c) Rejection (rejected manuscript will be sent back to authors). All efforts are made to provide fair and thorough reviews as speedily as possible. If an author(s) believes that a manuscript has been wrongly rejected, a detailed appeal letter that responds point-by-point to the reviewers' comments should be sent to the Editor who, after having reviewed the referees' reports, will make the final decision. For these types of submissions, the corresponding author will receive a fairly rapid decision on publication.

2. Revised Submissions

Authors are requested to submit the revision within two weeks for all reviewing process. If not, the submission will be removed from the editorial system and needs to be submitted as a new submission.

6.5.4 Quality Control Process

Post acceptance that will be quality control process that tooks 2 weeks.

6.5.5 Decision-Making Process

The decision to accept for publication is based on the peer reviewer's and quality control recommendations, based on editor and reviewers comment. If there is a difference in the two reviewers' recommendations, the editor has the right to decide.

6.5.6 Proofreading, Payment, and Layout

1. Proofreading

The proofreading process for journal submissions is a critical step aimed at enhancing the manuscript's clarity, language quality, and overall presentation. In the case of the Jurnal Ners, professional proofreaders (Proofers) are engaged to ensure the highest standards of academic writing are met.

2. Layout

The layout process is the final step in preparing a manuscript for publication, ensuring it aligns with the journal's design standards and provides a professional, reader-friendly format. After proofreading, the manuscript is formatted using the journal's template, including consistent placement of text, tables, figures, and references, as well as adjustments to font, spacing, and pagination. The layout team ensures accuracy and uniformity across all elements, including captions and in-text citations. A proof version is then shared with the author for final review and approval, ensuring the article is polished and publication-ready.

6.5.7 Copyediting stage

The copyediting stage in Jurnal Ners is the final step before publication, where the manuscript is meticulously refined for grammar, punctuation, formatting, and adherence to the journal's style guidelines. Authors are provided the copyedited version for review, and once approved, no further changes will be accepted, as this finalized version is prepared for publication. This process ensures the manuscript meets the highest standards of quality and professionalism, ready to represent both the authors and the journal.

6.5.8 Publication

Following acceptance of a manuscript, the corresponding author will receive an acknowledgement. The paper will then be edited to comply with house style, and typeset. The Publisher will email a proof to the corresponding author for checking before it is published. The corresponding author is responsible for checking proofs thoroughly. By approving the proofs any editorial changes are being accepted.

7. TITLE PAGE FORMAT

Regarding the double-blind peer review policy, the author must separate any information about the author's identity from the main manuscript. Thus, all information related to the author(s) should be mentioned only on the title page. The title page must be uploaded in the Open Journal System (OJS) as supplementary file. The format of the title page is described below (or can be downloaded here):

Use the present verb tense, especially for established facts; however, refer to specific works or prior studies in the past tense. If needed, use subheadings to help organize your discussion or to categorize your interpretations into themes. The content of the discussion section includes: the explanation of results, references to previous research, deduction, and hypothesis.
